

Technocracy the new Progressive Utopia

Part One

Barack H. Obama ran a Presidential campaign in 2008 based on Hope and Change which his supporters both White and Black assumed would be a new peaceful world without conflict and that there would be good jobs for everyone: and Obama got the Nobel peace prize just for the promise of that perfect world. Thomas More in his 1516 book on a perfect society called that kind of perfect society Utopia, which was also the name of the book, and that word has stuck ever since. Eight years later we have no "real" jobs, society is in total disarray and we are on the brink of war with Russia; how could this be? I would suggest that the result we actually have today is exactly what Obama and his supporters wanted to happen after he was elected President in 2008. Remember he never did tell us what he was going to do, he only promised that he would fundamentally change the country.

Obama has been accused of being Muslim based on his early background and many of his actions while president and that could be true. However, more importantly he is also a Marxist/Communist, at heart, whom in their modern form are the global elites who are smart, educated and very, very wealthy and prefer to be called progressives. In Technocracy Rising a book published in 2015 and written by Patrick M. Wood who explains in great detail how the new world order (NWO) has formed from the ashes of three previously failed concepts which are: Communism, Socialism and Fascism. One could also add Islamism to this as well since all four isms require a very powerful central federal government to manage each of their visions of Utopia. Angelo M. Codevilla wrote an excellent book on those that want to rule us titled the Ruling Class which was publishing in 2010.

Although the vision of a Utopia is powerful, it is an illusion no different than a belief in a Heaven although at least Heaven can only be obtained after death by those that lead a good and moral life; while Utopia can be obtained in the here and now if only we would believe in our leaders who are our betters by their demonstrated superior abilities. Unfortunately this concept of Utopia is not possible since mankind is human and therefore by definition not perfect and worse we are very easily corrupted. Niccolo Machiavelli wrote probably one of the best works on those that desire power in The Prince published in 1513. Therefore to strive for Utopia is a fool's game or worse a game played by only by those that want to rule but not be elected; the European Union (EU) was their first experiment in the NWO of technology based rule. The ruling body of the EU in Brussels is composed entirely of appointed people (best and the brightest) and not a single person that governs the EU is elected by the people. Perhaps this is the return to an aristocracy (monarchy) as discussed in the four stages of government in book VIII of the Republic written by Plato around 380 BC; so perhaps not much has changed in the past 2,400 years of human history.

Both Obama and his planned successor Hillary were the handpicked minions of the world cartel of the rich and powerful, i.e. George Soros and Bill Gates both documented members of the Technocracy. It was their task to complete the process of eliminating the U.S. Constitution and replacing it with a governing body similar to that installed in the EU. This was required because they needed total control of everything to make their vision of Utopia work and those that desired this had been at this task in earnest since the end of WW II through organizations such as the Trilateral Commission, the Council on Foreign Relations and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) and their workhorse the Intergovernmental Panel Climate Change (IPCC) which were all established along with many other agencies in the last half of the twentieth century. Hillary, the closer, was picked to complete the transformation of the European and North American counties into the NWO started by Obama the good guy.

The transformation to a NWO might have worked if the cartel members were as smart as they thought they were but since their motives were more for personal gain than a true Utopia (they knew that Utopia was not possible) the personal motives drove the transformation too quickly and their transformation started to break down after 2009. This transformation process was actually predicted in the book The Fourth Turning published in 1997 by William Strauss and Neil Howe as the result of the Boomer generation, those born between 1946 and 1964, comprising about 76 million babies who started the process of retiring 60 some years later around 2006. This generation caused a great deal of conflict as they progressed through their lives and according to Strauss and Howe the views of the Boomers would totally change America (sound familiar), however what was left unsaid in the book was whether that change would be good or bad. What happened just as the Boomers started to enter college in the mid 60's was to shape them forever and their legacy will be what happens as they become the elder statesmen/women of America and what path they put the rest of us on.

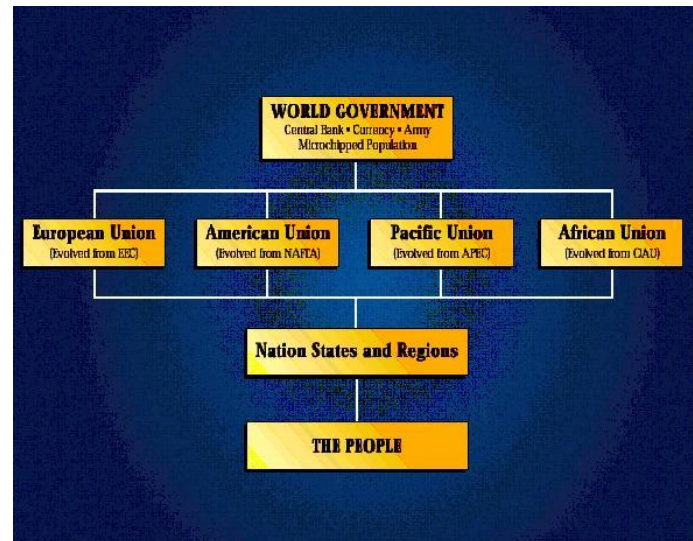

Before we can continue, this discussion we need more background specifically on Karl Marx and his work in trying to develop a better political system; unfortunately for hundreds of millions who have since died trying to implement his theories he forgot one thing, human nature. Marx was obviously a very intelligent person and saw injustice in Europe as the industrial revolution transformed society in the Nineteenth Century. His theory was that all value came from "labor" was valid but was also incomplete; this was not his fault as no one back then saw the technology revolution that was to come in the twentieth century. Marx wrote almost 3,000 pages explaining his theories in Capital Vol. I, Vol. II and Vol. III but he left out the most important part which is how his system would be governed, the actual form of the government system required to support Marx's concept was never developed by him.

Those that followed Marx focused on the means to achieve Marx's workers' paradise, Utopia but were never able to establish a government that wasn't a dictatorship to manage that Utopia and so every attempt at doing this has in the end failed. Focusing here, on America, the Boomers were strongly influenced by the progressive movement (those that believed in Communist principles) in the first half of the twentieth century and one in particular was Saul D. Alinsky who wrote Rules For Radicals published in 1971 a year before he died which documented the principles the progressive movement used after World War II. Alinsky developed the concept of Community Organizing of which Barry Sorento later after he left Indonesia to become Barack H. Obama followed in Chicago on his path to the US Presidency

Another important concept was developed by two progressives Richard Cloward and Frances Fox Piven both at Columbia University which Obama was to attend prior to Harvard. The ideas of these two progressives was to become known as the Cloward-Piven Strategy first published in a May 1966 article in the liberal magazine The Nation titled "The Weight of the Poor:" In essence the strategy was to use the laws of society to bring society down so it could be remade using progressive principles. The idea was used very successfully in the early 70's which almost bankrupted New York City in 1975 by getting everyone entitled to "welfare" to enroll in the available programs whether they need it or not.

The last element to be used to try and fundamentally transform America was the takeover of the Environmental movement by the progressives after the U.S.S.R. (Soviet Union) was dissolved on December 26, 1991. Prior to the 90's there was a legitimate cause to protect the environment from "real" pollution; however, in the early 90's the progressives took over and changed the movement into protecting us from "imaginary" pollution using the Cloward-Piven Strategy to create a strawman war against Carbon Dioxide the very key to all life on the planet.

World Climate is a variable and always has been as anyone that studied the subject prior to the late 70's early 80's understood; further Carbon Dioxide which has now been ruled a pollutant by the U.S. Supreme Court first in 2007 and then again in 2009 is however an absolute requirement for life to exist on the planet and more is beneficial to life rather than less, further the current Carbon Dioxide levels in the Holocene geological epoch, which is what we are in now, are well below geological averages.

Part Two

On November 22, 1963 our President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas Texas by those I now believe were the people that were to become the New World Order (NWO) movement 20 some years later. The movement was actually formally started by President George H. W. Bush who signed UN Agenda 21 in 1992 for the United States and referred to it as the One World Government OWG. Then in 1993 President William J. Clinton signed Executive Order #12852 to create the President's Council on Sustainable Development and with that order the progressive transformation of America was started.

Of course back then we couldn't know any of that and it seemed the assassination was either from the mob or the Communists' as we were led to believe by the media. But now looking back at that period what happened in 1963 when Lyndon Baines Johnson (LBJ), Kennedy's VP, became President after Kennedy was assassinated was a series of events that would have dire consequences for the United States. These events started with the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution in 1964 which immediately escalated the low level conflict in Vietnam to a full scale war and which eventually caused the deaths of almost 60,000 American soldiers and gave us over 300,000 wounded to somewhat care for and forget, I was one of them. It also split the country into warring factions for generations.

Decades later when I read David Habersham's The Best and the Brightest published in 1972 I first realized that intelligence alone was insufficient to make a good ruler and in fact could be an actual hindrance. The sad thing was we got nothing for this war except a lot of disillusioned citizens; so was this escalation in Vietnam only a distraction for what was to come next in 1965? When LBJ rammed through the U.S. Congress 87 pieces of legislation that were to totally change the makeup of the country, and not all for the good, as all the problems that we have now stemmed from what happened in 1964 and 1965. The LBJ agenda designed to change America for the better contained four related but different objectives.

- The first was called the "Great Society" with legislation upholding civil rights, public broadcasting, Medicare, Medicaid, aid to education, the arts, urban and rural development, and public services.
- The second was the "War on Poverty" which contained Civil rights bills that banned racial discrimination in public facilities, interstate commerce, the workplace, and housing.
- The third was the "Voting Rights Act" which banned certain requirements in "southern" states used to disenfranchise African Americans.
- Lastly was the "Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965" where the country's immigration system was reformed and all racial origin quotas were removed (replaced by national origin quotas).

All of these programs had some or maybe even a lot of merit but there were also consequences, some of them major, which were all ignored. The bottom line was this was way too much to do absorb at one time and so it went very bad over the next 50 years. The question that comes to mind now is how all this major work could have been put together in only a few months while LBJ was simultaneously assuming the office of the president and then having to run for election an additional few months later. Eighty Seven major pieces of legislation conceived written and passed in 1965. That is something that had never been done before or after.

Looking back we can see what the plan was, a total remake of our society, but back then it wasn't obvious or we would have stopped it. The devil that was in these programs was the fracturing of the single American culture into multiple sub cultures and as any student of history and political thought understands that is "never" good and is often fatal for those countries that try doing that. Montesquieu explains in his 1748 book The Spirit of the Laws the problems with multiple cultures or sentiments as they were then called within a single government. Further he implied that to change the form of the government the culture would need to be changed first. The progressives knew this and have done a very good job which maybe irreversible now of changing American culture so they could get their NWO.

This was done primarily through two means that became prevalent in the early 90's which were Political Correctness (PC) and Multiculturalism; although other destructive factors were also in play. The result was we eliminated the differences between good and bad so that no one would be hurt; there were no differences between people, sexes or cultures so no one was better than any other one. And at the same time we were told that we were not American's we were White Americans, Black Americans, and Hispanic Americans etc. etc. which was very strange since this was the exact opposite of the teaching that we are all the same.

As bad as all this cultural change was it was not all that was being done to us as economists and politicians who thought they knew how everything worked (the best and the brightest) came up with what was obviously a Ponzi scheme that we could have an economy where everyone was college educated and blue collar work was almost eliminated and this could be done by shipping the dirty nasty blue collar work off to other places in the world for others to do the dirty work while we enjoyed the all benefits. Besides being a totally insane concept how they ever thought this would work just shows just how twisted the thinking was of those in power, like George Soros who's self-proclaimed best moment in his life was turning his fellow Jews into the German Nazi's who were over running Europe during the early stages of WW II. This twisted man made billions by shorting countries currencies and causing them economic distress for his personal gain. He is now one of the driving forces in the NWO to include heavily financing the Democrat party and other groups including many Republicans'.

The economists and politicians' that concocted this scheme based the logic on the early stages of the industrial revolution where we transitioned from agriculture to production which then created the middle class. After WW II and the Korean conflict technology was taking off and what was envisioned was a "service" based economy where, in essence, everyone was to be employed as white collar and mostly college educated. There is no way this was ever possible and I even wrote my economics theses in collage on this subject in 1965 which was that as technology advanced there would be a dislocation in the work force as fewer and fewer people would be able to do the complex tasks. Therefore, work needed to be provided in proportion to those able to do it or fewer and fewer people would be supporting more and more people, that didn't or couldn't work, which is the Ponzi scheme they created. It all sounded good as the U.S. Government financed the shift of manufacturing to Japan, China, Indonesia and India by selling them U.S. Government securities creating a trading system by which they send us cheap goods and we send them the jobs (the means) to make them. I'm sure you the reader can see how well that worked.

United we stand, divided we fall used to be what we were about in America and the country grew by assimilating a diverse range of people that came here to be free, work and raise their families, "without" any federal assistance. And prior to the changes instituted by LBJ in 1965 we were much more one culture than multiple cultures and the result was that we were the shining light on the hill or maybe more the ones that went to the moon and back in 1969 a feat still not equaled 47 years later. But while we basked in our accomplishments we didn't understand that our very roots, what it meant to be an American, were being chopped up and destroyed on the altar of equality of outcome and income redistribution which are the very heart of progressivism.

The result of this insanity was that by 2015, fifty years after being started by LBJ, every institution that had been built and rebuilt over 5,000 years of progress by mankind had been totally destroyed and the country was collapsing both culturally i.e. marriage and family and economically i.e. fewer good jobs mounting debt and the loss of much of our national sovereignty. Watch this U-Tube video from Bill Whittle for what the progressive politicians' did to the city of Detroit, Google THE MOST SHAMEFUL INJUSTICE as an example of what I'm saying here.

Part Three

In the book the Fourth Turning the greed of the Boomers, they were first called the “me generation”, was likely to cause a second American civil war as they bankrupted the country with their plush retirement programs. Government employees at all levels along with teachers and some Police and Fire in certain states retire with pensions worth more per year than they were making before their retirement. Of course this is not all of them but it is a big enough group that it is a serious national problem today, and not limited to America as the EU has the same problem and it's even more serious there than here.

The next two generations that follow the Boomers, Generation X and the Millennials' were left far behind as the Boomers ran rough shod over the economy and society taking everything they could for themselves. Wall Street which financed the Boomers that broke up the manufacturing base and shipped the 'good' jobs to Asia did that for personal gain, the large contingent of boomers that used drugs established the drug lords in Mexico to supply them, the boomers running today's business want cheap labor so they want open borders. But the worst of them went into politics and both Democrats and Republicans (the best and the brightest), conspired to create either an Oligarchy or possibly even a Monarchy in which they could rule the rest of us. The Boomers that went in this direction like the Clintons and the Bushes knew that they had to change the culture. The work of President Johnson in 1965 gave them everything that they needed and as the Boomers graduated from college many of them went into teaching and so by the 90's they had coopted a large portion of the education system and were helped by the newly created Department of Education in doing so with federal funds that were available only if federal rules were followed.

In the U.S. Constitution the federal government was specifically banded from direct involvement in the states by the Tenth Amendment; but the federal government could tax the people directly after the 16th Amendment was passed in 1913 so the increased taxes could then be used to bribe the states to follow rules they could not dictate directly with the peoples own money. There are only a few colleges left, i.e. Hillsdale that have resisted this process which means only the wealthy can go there. What happens now is that whenever a state balks at a federal regulation the federal government tells them they will stop highway funds or education funds or any of the other funds the feds supply. The power of the purse!

Those that betrayed us reside mostly in Washington, the 100 Senators, the 435 Representatives, the President, the Vice President and the 9 Judges of the Supreme Court and they collectively decided they wanted to be rulers, not elected officials, beholding to we the citizens. These traitors don't work for us they work for and get their power from those with the real power of huge wealth and money, the special interests. Those super elites are like Bill Gates that are multi-billionaires and to be in the top ten you need to have more than $40 billion while the other 1,816 with only a mere billion to $39 billion mostly don't even count. These are the NWO people that want to rule us.

Donald Trump understood what was happening to our country and knew that we were at a turning point in history as predicted by Strauss and Howe in their book The Fourth Turning and he saw that if Hillary got elected the result would be very bad and so he decided to stop the change or at minimum control the change. Trump knew this because he could see what was happening in the 2010, 2012 and 2014 elections as there was an obvious movement building for change as the public no longer trusted the politicians. This was not just in American movement it was all of Western Civilization as the BREXIT election in England showed and so trump declared his candidacy and joined the movement. Those of us that had formed the movement first as the Tea Party immediately adopted him as the leader of the movement as we could see that he understood us.

Trump ran a campaign targeted at the movement Tea Party plus and used the media to reach us despite the all-out effort to stop him by the Democrats, many Republicans, the national media and the Federal Government and since he had first won the citizens he was not beatable. Is Trump perfect, of course not, he is human, but as I see it none of the others even see the problem and further are not capable of making changes even if they wanted to. The reason they are not capable is that to make any major change requires legislation be passed in the US Congress and since neither the Republicans nor the Democrats want the change it will require a super negotiator which means Trump who is the best in the country. So I voted for him as did enough others that he is going to be the next president since he is the only one that actually seeks to put all of the broken pieces of America together again and has the necessary skill set to do it for us.
